It's a rare sight to see a woman in a black dress with a white collar and a white skirt, sitting on a red chair. The image is a fashion illustration by Kate Gibb.

TEXT BY LAIRD BORELLI

Of the recent resurgence in fashion illustration, Borelli says, "It offered a (palliative) alternative to the dreary, shock-seeking, sex riddled though not quite porn photographic of the time... illustration, by contrast, offered fantasy, satire and humour... leaving wiggle-room for viewer participation." Borelli, in this, her second book on the subject, draws together the evocative art of the day, including the dadaist collages of Maren Esdar, the stylised erotica of Ross Kirton and Kate Gibb's Warholesque screen prints. A great sourcebook.
